

Farhad Ghadiri

Kharazmi University, IRAN

Dr. Ghadiri graduated from Tehran University with a BA in Physical Education in 2002 and a MA in Motor Behaviour in 2005. After teaching at Iran's Physical Education School for four years, he studied for the PhD in Motor Behaviour at Kharazmi University. After graduation, Dr. Ghadiri began to teach handball, motor development, and the principles of physical education in schools. During this period he provided consultations for several doctoral students.

Dr. Ghadiri does research and publishes in the field of motor development and motor learning. He is currently a faculty member at Kharazmi University and manages the Department of Motor Behaviour.

Topic for the 12th International Teaching Week

- Implicit motor skill learning